- Tailored Interiors is a deep dive into interior designer Patrick Sutton's design approach from the perspective of acclaimed author Vicky Lowry
- Lowry's introduction delves into Sutton's childhood to explore how he developed his empathetic approach to design. In the engaging project narratives, Lowry speaks to Sutton and many of his clients to tell the stories of how he created the unique and bespoke designs
- The foreword by Steele Marcoux, editor in chief of VERANDA magazine, will inspire readers to dream about the story Sutton could bring to life in their own future home
- The seven residences include stately manors, an oceanfront mansion, a luxurious guesthouse, and a Western holiday home. Each project features stunning imagery accompanied by captions that offer more insightful detail about Sutton's designs, furniture selection, and distinctive approach
- The book is presented with a beautiful grey cloth cover woven with different tones, mauve-blue foil stamping of the title, and debossed typographical ornament on the front cover. The pages are printed on matt coated art paper
- The firm is active on Instragram (@patricksuttondesign) and has more than 16,000 followers

In this follow up to Storied Interiors (2018), interior designer Patrick Sutton presents seven beautiful and unique residences. Taking a deep dive into Sutton's distinctive approach, acclaimed author Vicky Lowry tells the story of each home and how listening to his clients has inherently shaped the design.

The seven homes, located in Delaware, Maryland, Washington, D.C., and Wyoming, run the gamut from a crisply furnished, minimalist countryside retreat and a classic yet contemporary seaside estate, to a historic house given new life with striking furnishings and seductive colours, and a property in Jackson Hole with a pared-down aesthetic rather than the typical trappings of the American West. While Sutton's objectives for every project might be similar—discovering the 'story' to help him craft a design that is influenced by the location, history, and his clients—he is adept at working in a variety of styles, with an approach that remains fluid and open-minded.

Each project in Tailored Interiors is illustrated with gorgeous photography and accompanied by a narrative about the client, their aspirations, and Sutton's compassionate approach to the design. It is through vision and empathy that Sutton creates such rich, meaningful, and liveable interiors and helps his clients achieve their dreams.

Patrick Sutton is an industry leader in the world of luxury interior design. Through his unique storytelling approach to design, Patrick tailors each interior to his client's dreams and aspirations, crafting bespoke homes and spaces specially for them and their lives. As such, Patrick and his work have been widely lauded. He has been named one of the world's top 21 interior designers by Homes & Gardens, and one of the world's top 100 design firms by Andrew Martin. His work on the Sagamore Pendry helped earn it the designation as the #1 hotel in the country by the readers of Condé Nast Traveler. Patrick's work has been widely published in leading shelter magazines.

Vicky Lowry is a writer, editor, and the former special projects editor at Architectural Digest, features director of Elle Decor, House Beautiful, and VERANDA, and executive editor of Martha Stewart Living. She received a master's degree from Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism.
